Ní raibh	“It didn’t have to do with anything dishonest. But it wasn’t very respectable either.
B’fhearr	I’d rather progress than slip back.”
D’fhéach	Kelly looked at Colm’s application again.
Tá	“You have a letter of recommendation here from an attorney.
An bhfuil	Is that true?”
Tá	“Yes,” said Colm enthusiastically.
An bhfaca	“Have you seen the vacuum cleaner yet?”
Ní fhaca	“No.”
Gheobhaidh	“I’ll get one for you.”
D’imigh	Kelly went into another room.
Thug	Colm glanced at the girl.
An éiríodh	“Do you think I’ll succeed in getting the job?” he asked.
D’ardaigh	She raised her head and looked coldly at him.
Anneoin	Despite the unfriendliness in her expression, it was clear to Colm that this girl was a gem with her large grey eyes and her lovely round face under curly golden brown hair.
Is eagal	“I’m afraid you’ll succeed,” she said.
An eagal	“Are you?”
Is eagal.	“Yes.
Is duine	Kelly is a kind person and he pities you.”
Ach	“But why wouldn’t you like me to get this job?
Nach	Am I not able to sell vacuum cleaners as well as everyone?”
D’fhéach	She looked at the elegant clothes he was wearing and smiled.
Is	“Mr. Kelly is a very smart inventor.
Ach	But he doesn’t have much understanding of business affairs.
Dá	If he were able to get a competent travelling salesman, who would understand how to put the devices on the market, he would be on the pig’s back.
Ach	But it’s apparent that your not the person that’s needed and I’m afraid, therefore, that Kelly will go bankrupt.”
