Ní	“That doesn’t bother me,” said Colm.
Dála	“By the way, is that opportunity over to go into partnership with your man?”
Níor	“It hasn’t been withdrawn yet, but I have no hope that I’ll get the loan of money now.”
Bhuel	“Well, I should be going.”
Tá	“My aunt is going to give me lunch.”
Tá	“She has a lot of money and I’m hoping to entice a little lump from her.”
Thug	He gave Colm a card.
Tá	“My address and my telephone number are there.”
Má	“If you are in trouble, call me and I will come help you.”
Go raibh	“Thanks a lot, Thomas,” said Colm.
Nuair a	When his friend had gone, he dialed his attorney’s number.
Dia	“Hello,” he said.
An tUasal	“Mr. O’Shea! Where are you?” asked de Paor.
Is cuma	“It doesn’t matter. Listen to me.”
Teastaíonn	“I need you to send a letter to Thomas Murray, 17 Da Vinci Crescent, Dublin 4.”
Abair	“Tell him that one of your clients, who wishes to keep his name hidden, is willing to give him 20,000 on loan free of interest for five years on condition that he will make profitable use of the money.”
Tabharfaidh	“I’ll take care of this business right away,” said de Paor. “But tell me ...”
Slán	“Bye!” Colm put the receiver back and got on with the bar work again.
